

What are the growth prospects for the developing countries in a world where the advanced capitalist economies are stagnant? What are the implications for fiscal and monetary policies with quantitative easing? One must distinguish between (current account) surplus economies and deficit economies. Finally is infrastructure investment a solution?